AUNT SALLY'S MUFF.

Aunt Sally, as the village usually called her, had received the bulk of her property, from a deceased abut, which her shrewd business qualities had enabled her to invest business qualities had enabled her to invest so advantageously that she increased in wealth as she did in years, and like many other rich people well advanced in life, had scores of affectionate young relatives. Her cold gray eyes were too shrowd not to see through their eager attentions to the very Selfishness of their source.

One nephew, however, did not belong to this class of schemers. On the centrary, the old lady was very often the victim of his jokes, and he would dispute with her just for the fun of having a hot argument. Yet, for any real service, she would to him oftener than any one else. She had even lent him a sum sufficient to stock a fine store, but still this Frederick so often annoyed and vexed her, that public opinion was pretty equally divided as to whether he would be the favorite heir, or be cut off with a shilling, upon the meeting of the purish sewing circle at the house of the clergyman, this nephew perpetrated a joke upon his aunt, the result of which she never forgot. She, unlike many maiden ladies, considered these gatherings a sort of fash ionable nuisance, but uscally was present for the sake of infulging in her sarcustic remarks. Her nephew was there ostensibly to wait upon his aunt, but the fair Lucy, daughter of the worthy practitioner, Dr. Blood, particularly allured him with ther charms;

charms. The evening passed off pleasantly, and when the party broke up, as Frederick was taking leave of his friends, with his aunt upon one arm and Lucy upon the other, the old lady suddenly remembered that she bad left her muff.

O, never mind, aunt," said the Young man, "I will get it and send it up to you in the morning."

But I do mind, Fred Strong, for it is not my way to leave things about in this manner. But where can it be? I certain.

Aunt Sally seized her mulf, but the hat adhered most effectually to it. By an angry wrench it was liberated, and the unoffending hat flew across the crity, projected by the incensed maiden. When it arrived at the terminus of its short journey, it had assumed a most questionable shape, and its condition might certainly have been term ed "shockingly bad."

would have thus offended you."

Time passed on and young Strong pros pered famously in his business. He amassed sufficient means to be enabled to pay his aunt the sain she had lent him, but she declined receiving it, alleging that the DARTIES purchasing machines of the OROVER & feired to have it remaining on interest. In the meantime, be had also persuaded the gentle Lucy to share his fortunes. As for Aunt Sally, a singular mania seemed to nossess her. the was often seen to visit the office of Squire A --- and it was rumored she was naking her final arrangements for the bestowal of her property after her decease. -The affair of the muff was not forgotten, and it was current with the villagers that Fred would have to pay dearly for his joke. One morning the village was all in action. During the night the spirit of the redoubtable lady had taken its flight. She was found dead in her arm chair, and died as she had lived-alone. She had alarmed no one during the night; nor had she suf-fered previous illness. Curiosity, of course, was intense upon the subject of her will, and it was produced as soon as decency would allow. All her connections wer present, and their eager, hopeful, anxious countenances would have furnished a rare subject for the pencil of the artist. The eading of the will proceeded until it was inished, except a single condicil. Each of er relatives, excepting her nephew, had een remembered-some to a greater exent than others, but none considerably.

At all events not one-third of her fortune ad been dispensed, and only the codicil remained. All eyes were turned to Frederick Strong as the lucky one, after all. But what was their surprise when they found it only made him the recipient of her old sable muff and contents. .. The word " contents " again-excited their curiosity, and to satisfy hem, the article was produced and found only to contain a simple paper sewed upon the lining. When detached and opened, in the bold handwriting of Aunt Saliy were found these words :

DEAR NEPHEW :- You will doubtless appreciate this, the last joke I, shall ever guilty of, as, I appreciate yours on a certain time you will remember. God bless you and yours. Farewell."

Frederick declared he was satisfied. The old lady had fairly retorted upon him, and MACHINES he certainly deserved nothing better at her hands.

But what had become of Aunt Sally's money? That was the mystery and it be came a wonder to the worthy villagers, who discussed it on every occasion. She was FLORENCE SEWING MACHINE Enown to have large sums of money at the various banks, but all this the anxious relatives ascertained was drawn out a few days before her death. Squire A was con-sulted, who had drafted the will, but he stortly maintained that the will covered the whole amount of her property, and he would Rth Observa the trucks, and examine the workman have nothing further to do with it.

His own note also came to light, from which his name had been torn off. This new revelation of course created an immense excitement among the villagers but Frederick and his wife kept on in the even tenor of their way—respected by all, not for their wealth, simply, but for themselves. Another Disaster to the 1 wenty-Sec-oud Regiment.

By special dispatch from Surgeon Burhank, we have the painful intelligence that the remainder of the twenty second regiment was captured, yesterday morning, near Franklin, Tennessee. Only eight men, four sick and four wounded, who were at Brentwood, are left. There must have been between four and five hundred taken prisoners in this last disaster, as there were 159 lost at the affair of Spring Hill, on the 2d of March.

One of the companies taken prisoners yesterday, belonged in this city and vicinity-Company E, Capt. Miles. Consequently, there is great anxiety to hear further particulars. As two of our citizens were there on a visit to the regiment, Messrs. J. M. Burgess and Jesse Miles, it is not impossible that they are also prisoners. P. S.-Mr. Burgess has just returned.

It is not at all improbable that they will be joined, in the state, by as many more. Hence the inva- have his services required for the defense sion is one of great danger to the state, as of the country. The opinion closes as fol well as to the neighboring state of Ohio, and especially the city of Cincinnati. It is fortunate that Gen. Burnside has arrived there, just in time, with his old army corps, consisting of about 6,000 disciplined veterans, who will serve as a rallying point for the other troops of the department. What other forces are there is ernment has doubtless provided for the emergency. Gen. Rosecrans can scarcely be considered in danger in consequence of it, as the Cumberland river is in good navigable condition for gunboats and transports. We shall, probably, in consequence of this raid, soon hear of a battle between his army and Bragg's.

Newspapers for Members of the Leg-islature.

We learn that the bill to reduce the amount given to each member of the legislature for the purpose of taking newspapers during the session, from $20, as it now is, to $10, has been indefinitely postponed. The whole law ought to be repealed, instead of being amended. Beyond the number of two or three different papers for each member, which might amount to five dollars during the session, the whole is a useless expenditure out of the treasury. For newspapers, the legislature pays now, annually, $2,500, which are given to the members. On the plea that those papers should be sent home to enlighten their constituents, the members usually vote themselves about $2500 more in stamps for pre-paying

Sending papers home, however, is not necessary, as the people are generally posted by the newspaper they take themselves. This is conceded by many of the members, who, instead of enlightening their constituents in this way, furnish literary matter to their own families, in the shape of magazines. New York Ledgers, &c., with their twenty dollar appropriations. This small fraud has even been carried so far as to make out a sham order for papers, get it receipted, and then take the amount in stawilling to say, was never practiced, so far are for the legislature and not for the courts to determine. Upon this question, what as we know, by any member from this county.

Five thousand dollars a year might be saved to the state by repealing the law and the present extraordinary condition of affairs, when more than 40,000 of the citizens of this state have left it in the serand postage, and we had hoped this legislature would repeal this useless appropria- may be said upon the subject, this at least tion of the people's money in these times is true, that history has fornished no better of high taxes.

GEN. PILLOW .- General Pillow recently made a speech at Madison, Ala., in which he said that the federal forces had taken from him not only his negroes, but had burned four gin-houses, worth $10,000 each; they had taken 100,000 pounds of bacon, 2,500 fine cattle, destroyed his houses in Arkansas, laid waste his plantations, and otherwise injured him in many respects

From the Madison Journal. Three Important Decisions by the Su

The supreme court announced decisions in three very important cases at its session

The first was in the matter of the appli the first was in the matter of the appro-cation of Frederick Greiner and others, res-idents of Manitowoc county, drafted into the military service of the United States, for a writ of habeas corpus to release them from Camp Randall, on the ground that the law of congress authorizing the draft is unconstitutional and void.

The opinion was read by Judge Cole, and concurred in by Judges Dixon and

The ground upon which the constitutionality of the act of congress of last summer was contested, as those will remember wheel crevasse, creating a perfect furore of ex read the report of Mr. Ryan's argument published in this paper, was that the act ing waters reeling like a drunken man, and attempted to delegate legislative power to all expected every moment to see her the President by authorizing him, in the swamped in the boiling torrent. First on absence of state laws regulating the mode of making the draft, "to make all necessary rules and regulations therefor." counsel for the petitioners claimed that the making of such rules and regulations was an exercise of legislative power, which congress could not delegate. The opinion very ably argues and rebuts this objection, quoting numerous authorities. Thus a similar provision is contained in a law of congress of 1778, authorizing the raising of troops.

By the constitution, congress is clothed with the exclusive power of legislation over the District of Columbia, yet it delegates a part of that power to the municipal authorties. So also congress delegates a part of that power to territorial legislatures, though empowered by the constitution with anthor-"to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations" for the territories. So also congress had authorized couris to make regulations in practice. Several authorities were quoted to show that such acts to dispute our passage down the Yazoo at were not a delegation of legislative power and not obnoxious to constitutional objections. The application for a writ of habeas corpus was denied.

In the matter of the discharge of Carl Wehleitz, drafted into the military service, and released on a writ of habeas corpus issued by Court Commissioner Mitchell, of Milwaukee, the opinion was read by Judge Paine, Judges Dixon and Cote concurring. Wehleitz is an alien by birth, but has delared his intentions and voted in this state. Court Commissioner Mitchell held that only citizens of the United States are subject to lowed to proceed with his speech. draft. The opinion of Judge Paine is a very able one. It shows the distinction between citizens of a state and of the United States. Quotes Justice Story that the exer-'cise of the elective franchise is one of the chiefest evidences of citizenship. Quotes Webster's, Duers' and Burroughs' definition of a citizen as one having a right to vote and to hold office. Our state has no doubt designed to confer, as far as possible, citizenship upon aliens who have declared their intentions. The opinion quotes the case of Martin Koszta. He was not the rebels have invaded Kentucky with the even a voter. He was only a domiciled Marcy held him to be a citizen sufficient to be entitled to the protection of the government, and declared that he was liable to lows:
"The constitutions of several other states have extended to these persons rights of citizenship, similar to those given by this state. They have enjoyed the privileges and protection of citizens; they have filled the offices, taken part in the enactment of state laws, and had an equal voice with others in the election of the officers and the making of the laws of the United upon the principles of civil and religious liberty and equality of rights among men. They have shared our prosperity when we were prosperous and happy, and by every principle of justice and every sentiment of honor they ought to share the burdens in this hour of calamity and trial. And it is to be hoped that instead of shrinking from this high duty, they may be no less willing to bear their share of the burdens of war than prompt to claim privilege and preferment in times of peace."

The third case, J. C. Chandler vs. W. H. Main, Sheriff of Dana Co., involves the constitutionality of the law enabling sol-diers to vote. The opinion in this case was also by Judge Paine, Judges Dixon and Cole concurring. It sets forth that al-though it is true that laws of this state are of no force outside the state, yet it is no less true that the legislature may authorize acts to be done outside the limits of the state, and declare what effect they shall have within its limits. We have laws providing for the transfer of real estate lying within the state by persons in other states. If we can authorize persons outside the state to declare their will in regard to property within it, we can authorize citizens outside the state at the time of elections to declare their will in regard to the disposition of offices in the state.

Judge Paine quoted numerous authorities to show that a state may prescribe punishments for offences committed by its itizens outside its limits, in answer to the objection that this law affixes penalties for illegal voting. Section 5 of article 13 of the constitution respecting residents on In dian lands, and declaring they may vote at the nearest polls, " provided no person shall vote for county officers out of the county in which he resides," obviously meant not to prohibit the voter from casting his ballot outside of his county but to prohibit him from voting for county officers of a county in which he did not reside. The opinion concludes:

"I must therefore hold this law to be valid. I have examined only as to the power of the legislature to pass it. If the nowtionery and books. This, however, we are er exists, the policy and expediency of it ever arguments may be urged against the passage of such a law, there are, also, very strong considerations in its favor, as adaptvice of their country. But whatever else example, illustrating the capacity of the people for self-government than that fur-nished under this law of the citizen soldiers, charge their duties as the primary legislators of the republic, and to guard, by an intelligent use of their ballots, to be forwarded to their homes, the welfare of that country and those principles of civil liberty, for which they were ready at any moment to lay down their lives upon the field of Special to Chicago Tribune,-At sundown last evening the marriage of the Mis-sissippi with the headwaters of Wachita and Black rivers was consummated, and this morning a stream one hundred feet wide came raging out, tearing through the break in the levee. It is impossible to say what the end will be. This morning a skiff with three or four sailors went through the citement. The little craft entered the raga crested billow, then in the yawning chasm below, it was for some time doubtful which would conquer, the element or the vessel. When 300 feet below the little craft came into still water, the long pent up feelings of the spectators gave expression in shouts and cheers of congratulation and joy.

CAIRO, March 24. Memphis papers of Sunday report that another canal or cut off was being opened from the Mississippi, 60 miles below Heiena into Deer river, Washington Lake, and into Sunflower river, by which means we are to gain access to Yazoo river, between Yazoo City and Haines' Bluff.

The federal forces at Greenwood are still held at bay. The rebels have one 10 inch gun in their battery commanded by the former captain of the rebel ram Arkansas Several boats of the Yazoo expedition are much disabled by difficulties encountered en route. The rebels seem determined to dispute our position of the every available point.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 24. The body of Gen. Sumner was removed from his residence to the City Hall this morning, under a military escort from the alst regiment, and to the sound of mutiled drums. His remains lay in state during the day, upon a catafalque, under a canopy of handsomely decorated flowers, inte spersed with flowers of mourning, draped with flags. The massive burial case is adorned with boquets of natural flowers entwined with the stars and stripes. About 20,000 people visited the hall during the day, and paid their last respects to the lamented hero. A military guard is on duty over the remains, and the body will be returned to his late residence during the night under an escort. The funeral, which will take place at eleven o'clock to morrow merning, is expected to be the most imposng affair ever witnessed in Western or Central New York.

Cincinnati, March 24.
Gen. Burnside and staffarrived here this morning. He will assume command of the department to-morrow. General Burnside was serenaded to night by the Newport Barracks hand. A large crowd was pres-ent to welcome him, and his reception was,

Lew. Wallace, and said : My Friends-I beg to thank you for the very kind manner in which you have received me, and I take it as being the more complimentary, since I have come home among my own people.

It is gratifying to me because it seems to say that I have in your opinion done my duty. I come to you in the full and abiding faith in the success of our cause. have seen many and many dark hours in my soldier's experience, but in my darkest bours I have felt that the right will prevail I know that we have the physical ability to put down this rebellion, and if I doubted that, I should still feel that there is a God who will sustain the right. But I do believe that we have the strength and the ability to put down a rebellion which originated in fraud, deceit and ambition. It originated in fraud when the southern leaders stole from the government its arms and its arsenals, and were conspir ing to its ruin while they were subsisting on its substance.

If you show me a southern leader or a southern Sympathizer, and I say then we have an ambitious man, and the time has come when we must fight against ambition. when we must take as firm a stand as egainst this rebellion itself. Again, gentlemen. I thank you.

During the delivery of his short address the general was frequently interrupted by cheers and the vast crowd which had assembled, some calling out what was he going to do with the butternuts?

When the General retired Gen. Wallace was loudly called for. He refused to speak, but the crowd would take no refusal, and insisted on his speaking. He said he was glad that we have General Burnside among us. His whole character shows us that we have the man in the right place. [Loud cheers.] And what will be do with the butternuts? I do not know what he will do with the butternuts. Since he has been silent on the subject it become me to be silent too. I am inclined to think that Gen. Burnside is a peace man; you are very silent at that I see; but I mean that he is a peace man, inasmuch as he thinks the bayonet much more powerful than the ballot box in crushing out the rebellion and restoring the Union, and in this I can truly say he is a man after my own heart. General Wallace was vociferously cheen ed at the close of his remarks. A dispatch has been received to-day that 6,000 of Burnside's old troops will be here to-morrow, and preparations are making to feed them. It is estimated that there are from 15,000 to 20,000, all old confederate troops. Their cavalry force is very large. This afternoon they were reported within twenty miles of Lexington. The Union citizens of Dan-ville, 28 miles from Lexington, and other central towns of Kentucky, were fleeing northward, and sympathisers fully armed and equipped, were uniting with the confederate army by acores and hundreds. The ebel forces, it is stated, are invading Kentacky in three columns. They design appermanent occupancy of that state, but it s doubtful if they can secure a foothold efore General Burnside encounters and drives them back. They have Cumberland Gap fortified and will retreat to that strong hold, if necessary to save themselves. Both sides are now active and it is important to Rosecrans that the enemy are prevented from getting in his rear and driving him from his present base of operations. Меменія, Тепп., March 20, 1863. Editors Gazette: -- We struck tents at Moscow on the morning of the 19th inst., and pitched them again on our present camping ground on the 11th. The march in many respects was the hardest we have ever experienced. All of the 10th was marched in torrents of rain, and the roads being rendered almost impassable, our wagons were unable to come up with us by nightfall, so that we were obliged to bivousc without tent or blanket. Many straggled from exhaustion, so that when the regiment halted we had not more than one hundred men to stack arms, while every train that baffle a soldier on every hand. We are pleasantly located two miles east of Memphis, though we find good water to be very scarce. However, we shall not probably remain here long, as Vicksburg is predicted as our destination. Few evince any affinity for the sickly swamps of that region, while many indulge in the forlorn hope of reinforcing Rosecrans. The life of a soldier is one of haphagard and uncertainty, with but one alternative, to patiently wait for orders. Not more than half our regiment can be called fit for duty at present, which is in a great measure to be at tributed to the effects of our late march .-George W. Merry died in hospital at Mos cow on the 13th inst. We were rendered almost exetatic by the reception of a month and a half's pay a few days since, coupled with fair promises of more at no very distant period. New tents are said to be on the tapis, but "seeing is believing."

called upon to mourn is that of Captain Wemple, who died at the officer's hospital in this city on the evening of the 9th inst. It is not fit that such a man should pass from earth into that " undiscovered country, from whose bourne no traveler returns" without at least a passing notice. It is not fit that such a soldier, enlisted in the highest, the purest, as well as the noblest cause that ever employed the mind and tongue of the orator, or kindled the poet's sacred fire, should descend into the grave without expressions of regret from those who knew him longest and loved him best. A warm friend and an ardent admirer of the lamen ted dead, I claim the privilege of adding an humble tribute of respect to his memory, and of giving expression, faint though it be, to the poignant grief that wells up in the bosoms of those who were his companions in arms. In all the relations he sustained towards us we found him the amiable gentleman, the fine scholar, the kind officer and true friend. To all with whom he came in contact, he appeared the nature's noble-

He had perhaps passed through severe ordeals of temptation, yet he ever stood an inflexible advocate of the most rigid rules of temperance, of probity and of honor. It was his frequent boast, and for one reared among the stirring scepes of the far west, it was a proud one, that the bowl of intoxication had never touched his his lips. When he left us for the hospital, the 22d of February, few thought that he was bidding us adieu forever. But the Farragut went in alone and passed the reb-el batteries at night, under a terrible can-an eternity. He was at that time conscian eternity. He was at that time consci. BIG REDUCTION ons of approaching dissolution, he kne that the golden bowl was breaking at the fountain, that the silver cord that bound his soul to earth was fast being parted .-To the last he never despaired of the republic or doubted the ultimate success of our cause. His confidence was never stronger than then, that we were yet destined by the valor of our arms to win "indemnity for the past and security for the future." Death had no terrors for him, how could it have? for he was the soul of honor, and in his heart there was no guile. He was totally incapable of an ungentlemanly act, nor did he ever shrink from duty's call. The physical tortures of the battle field were to him insignificant when compared with the stain of an infamous action, or the reproach of a guilty mind,-Yes, he has fallen! fallen in manhood's prime, so young and with life so fair before the 1st district wont be declared until May. him. Co. F, 33d Reg. W. V. Currespondence of the Daily Gazotte. From the Third Cavalry.

MOUNT VERNON, Mo., March 18. Editors of Gazette: - Not having seen anything in print concerning the 3d Wisconsin Cavalry, I thought it well to write you a few lines, to let you know that we still live," and are in the field doing active service, and ready to deal stalwart blows on the head of this unholy rebellion, whenever an opportunity occurs. That part of the regiment which is in Missouri, are now on a march towards Forsyth, where rumor hath it, the enemy has shown himself of late in strong force. The whole of the first division of the army of the frontier are en route for the same point, and if the enemy should stand fire, you will hear of lively times from that point before long. Of course it is "contraband" to tell you their numbers or strength, but suffice it to say, they are strong enough to clean out any force the rebels may have at that point and will do it too, as they did Hindman and his host of rebels at Prairie Grove, in Arkansas, on the 7th of December, 1862. Since the 1st of September, 1862, the most of our regiment has seen the hardest kindof service, sconting, chasing bushwhackers, and fighting them whenever they showed head; and this has used up a number of the men, who are being discharged and sent home; a very wise measure in my opinion, so that none but the hardiest and most healthy will be retained in the regiment for the summer campaign. It seems to me if all our armies in the field had done as well, and been as active as the army of the frontier has, that this hydra headed retions to its load. What the "inevitable nebellion would have been in a much smaller compass than it now is, or likely to be for such a storm is one of the mysteries that some time to come. I am writing this in a temporary hospital, which has been improved, for the sick, who were unable to go on the expedition, and the sick are left in charge of our effecient 2d assistant surgeon, Dr. Joseph Lane, who has his hands (and heart too,) full, in seeing to them, with the facilities he has at his disposal; but he is succeeding admirably in getting things systematized, so that they are all being made as comfortable as the circumstances will permit.-And this reminds me that I have in snoth er letter, some ugly headed things to say to you about how some of the hospitals are conducted, and how the sick in them fare, &c. Our regiment will soon all be together again, which has not been the case since the let of June, 1862; and this, as far as I can learn, is going to give general satisfaction to the "bone and sinew" of the regiment, though it will not suit some lazy officers as well, for they rather take their ease at some post, as provost marshal, than serve their country actively in the field If this rebellion is to be put down, it innet be by seeking them (the enemy) and striking them too, in every available place, and not keeping large bodies of soldiers lying idleand rotting out at different "posts." The "post must be struck into the ground," as Schofield answered an officer last spring, but the soldiers must move, and that too, towards the enemy, and not in some other direction. The health of our colonel has been such that he has been unable to be with us during the winter, and of course the command has devolved on our wideawake lieutenant colonel, R. H. White, who, by the way, is one of the most active men I ever knew, and always ready for a scout or to fight, as either may present itself.

Milton Academy.

The winter term of this institution has inst closed; about two hundred students have been in attendance. The closing ex ercises came off at the appointed time, and although the weather was very unfavorable, Watches, Clocks & Jewelry the building was crowded each evening. The session of the Ladies' Literary was well seceived; some very happy local hits were made. The exercises of the Philomatheaus were not behind anything they have ever given to the public. The procreds:of the two sessions are to be devoted to the establishing of a library in the academy. The exercises of the Club, under the direction of Mr. Platts, were a perfect success. They well merited the general approval which they received. The vocal music, in connection with some very fine instrumental, pieces, made an entertainment seldom equalled by an improvised OBSERVER. company.

Dr. Jerome Burbank, surgeon of the 22d regiment, to whom we are indebted for the special dispatch giving an ac count of the recent disaster to his regiment, is a resident of Avon, in this county,-Capt. Bentliff, of Monroe, speaks of him as one of the best surgeons in the service.
